

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Patricio N Abinales is an assistant professor of political science at Ohio University and writes a monthly column for the Philippine Daily Inquirer-Mindanao Edition and a weekly column for the Sunstar Davao. He wrote his dissertation on 'State Authority and Local Power in Southern Philippines, 1900-1972' at Cornell University.

Jose V Abueva is professor emeritus of political science and public administration at the University of the Philippines where he served as president from 1987 to 1993. He holds degrees from UP (AB) and the University of Michigan (MPA & PhD). He taught at the City University of New York and at Yale University in the 1960s, and has published extensively here and abroad on political and administrative development and democracy. He has worked with the Ford Foundation and the United Nations University. He served as Secretary of the 1971 Constitutional Convention and as Chairman of the Legislative-Executive Bases Council.

Fernando T Aldaba is currently the executive director of the Ateneo Center for Social Policy and Public Affairs. He has a PhD in economics and is an assistant professor at the Department of Economics, Ateneo de Manila University.

Patricia Arinto is an assistant professor at the Department of English and Comparative Literature, University of the Philippines. She is currently the director of the UP System Information Office.

Armando Malay Jr is the dean of the Asian Center, University of the Philippines.

Satur C Ocampo, a journalist-political activist since the 1960s, is one of the leading figures of the Philippine Left and the democratic mass movement. A former spokesman and peace negotiator of the National Democratic Front in 1986-1987, he was a political prisoner of the Marcos dictatorship for over nine years and of the Aquino and Ramos regimes for three years.

Joel Rocamora is the executive director of the Institute for Popular Democracy, a think tank serving the popular movement in the Philippines. He has written extensively on Philippine and Indonesian politics. His most recent publications include Breaking Through — The Split in the Communist Party of the Philippines (Anvil Press, 1994) and the introductory chapter of Pork and Other Perks — Corruption in the Philippines (PCIJ, IPD, Evelio Javier Foundation, 1998).

Noel Teodoro is an associate professor of history at the College of Social Sciences and Philosophy, University of the Philippines. He obtained his BA (cum laude) and MA from the University of the Philippines, Diliman and his DEA and PhD in History and Civilization of the Malayo-Indonesian World from the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) in Paris in 1989. His research interests are in cultural history, modern Indonesian literature, and historiography.

Elmer A Ordoñez was professor and chair of the Department of English and Comparative Literature, University of the Philippines, and is now dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and vice-president for academic affairs, Lyceum of the Philippines, Manila.

Wang Gungwu is the director of the East Asian Institute at the National University of Singapore, distinguished senior fellow at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies and professor emeritus of the Australian National University. He has also taught at the University of Malaya (in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur) and was vice-chancellor of the University of Hong Kong from 1986 to 1995. Among his recent books are China and the Chinese Overseas; The Chineseness of China; The Chinese Way; China's Position in International Relations; and a new edition of The Nanhai Trade: The Early History of Chinese Trade in the South China Sea. He also edited Global History and Migrations.

Lito B Zulueta studied journalism at the Faculty of Arts and Letters of the University of Santo Tomas (UST). A former presidential reporter and newspaper editor, he is now director of the UST Press.

Public Policy is printed on Tahanan Buff, a recycled book paper manufactured in the Philippines.

Printed by Island Graphics

ERRATUM

Vol. II No. 1 (January-March 1998)

In the table of contents, the description of Gonzalo Jurado's essay, 'Global Capital: The Philippines in the Regional Currency Crisis,' should have read as follows: 'Speculators controlling foreign short-term capital not government policies are to blame. This essay takes up the cudgels for the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas and argues that it should not be the scapegoat for the peso's fall.' We apologize to the author for this error.