

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Onofre D Corpuz is professor emeritus of economic history at the School of Economics, University of the Philippines. He holds a PhD in political economy and government from Harvard University. Dr Corpuz has written extensively on public issues and Philippine history, in addition to having held positions such as UP President and Secretary of Education. His latest book, An Economic History of the Philippines, is reviewed by Norman G Owen in this issue.

Gonzalo M Jurado received his PhD in economics from the University of Wisconsin and is currently Visiting Senior Research Fellow at the Philippine Institute for Development Studies and consultant for economics and statistics to the Asian Development Bank. He was a senior expert on economic policy coordination at the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in Bangkok, lecturer in economic statistics and national accounts at the UN Statistical Institute for Asia and the Pacific in Tokyo, consultant to the International Labor Institute in Bangkok and professor of economics at the University of the Philippines. He has traveled extensively in the Asia Pacific region, studying and lecturing on economic and statistical issues in various countries.

Joseph Y Lim is a professor of economics at the University of the Philippines, Diliman.

Deepak Nayyar is a professor of economics at the Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India.

Norman G Owen is a professor of history at the University of Hong Kong. He is the editor and co-author of Compadre Colonialism: Studies on the Philippines Under American Rule (1971), the author of Prosperity Without Progress: Manila Hemp and Material Life in the Colonial Philippines (1984) and of The Philippine Economy and the United States: Studies in past and Present Interactions (1983).

Pheng Cheah was a student at Cornell University and the University of Sydney. He is currently associate professor of English at Northwestern University, Illinois. He is co-editor of Thinking Through the Body of Law (New York University Press, 1996) and of Cosmopolitics: Thinking and Feeling Beyond the Nation (University of Minnesota Press, 1998) and the author of various articles on legal philosophy, neo-colonial globalization, feminist theory, and contemporary critical theory. He is also a lawyer.

Roland G Simbulan is a professor of development studies and currently convenor for the Manila Studies Program at the University of the Philippines in Manila. He is the author of several books including The Bases of Our Insecurity (1983), A Guide to Nuclear Philippines (1989), and The Continuing Struggle for an Independent Philippine Foreign Policy (1991). He served as senior political consultant/adviser to Senator Wigberto E Tañada who led the historic rejection of the bases treaty on 16 September 1991.

Michael L Tan is an associate professor of anthropology at the University of the Philippines, Diliman.

Vicente B Valdepeñas Jr is a member of the Monetary Board of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas. From 1987 to 1996, he served as director and chief executive of the Southeast Asian Central Banks Training Center in Kuala Lumpur. He was director general of the National Economic and Development Authority (1983-1986), a member of Parliament (1983-1984) and Deputy Minister of Trade and Industry

Contributors

(1976-1983). He received his PhD in economics from Cornell University where he also taught economics. He has written two books on the Philippine economy.

Michael Vatikiotis is the Bangkok bureau chief of the Far Eastern Economic Review. He has worked as a correspondent in Southeast Asia since 1987 and was previously posted in Indonesia and Malaysia. He is the author of Indonesian Politics Under Suharto (1993) and Political Change in Southeast Asia: Trimming the Banyan Tree (1996). He graduated with a DPhil from Oxford University and a BA from the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He previously worked for the BBC World Service in London.

Wilfrido V Villacorta has a PhD in politics. He is a professor of international relations at the De La Salle University, Manila and is the president of its Yuchengco Center for East Asia. He was a member of the 1987 Constitutional Commission and had served as consultant to the office of former Senate President Jovito Salonga.

David Wurfel is a visiting professor of political science at the University of the Philippines and senior research associate at the Joint Center of Asia Pacific Studies, University of Toronto/York University. A long-time student of Philippine politics and author of Filipino Politics: Development Decay (Cornell University Press, 1988), he is also senior co-editor of and contributor to the Political Economy of Foreign Policy in Southeast Asia (1990) and Southeast Asia in the 'New World Order' (1996), both published by Macmillan. He received his PhD in government from Cornell University.